Church Group Zeroes In on Philippines

At a time when Administration officials are warning of a growing Communist guerrilla threat in the Philippines, liberal church groups in this country are pressing Congress to adopt a course of action that will guarantee a Communist takeover — termination of military and economic aid to the regime of President Ferdinand Marcos.

Nevertheless, a group called the Church Coalition for Human Rights in the Philippines held a news conference last week to urge that military and economic aid be denied to the Marcos government because of human rights abuses by the Philippine military and police forces.

Playing a major role in this lobbying effort is Walden Bello, the head of a group known as the Philippine Support Committee, who is also a member of the board of advisors of a publication called The National Reporter. The publication is better known by its former name — CounterSpy.

Although the names have changed, the purpose of the magazine remains the same: the undermining of U.S. foreign policy. CounterSpy is the anti-CIA magazine that exposed U.S. diplomat

Richard Welch as a CIA agent before his murder by terrorists in Greece in 1975.

The premier issue of The National Reporter includes articles on the "militarization of Honduras by the Pentagon" and the "warlike and dehumanizing policies of the U.S. government" in Central America.
